OBITUARY.

Seth Morton Vose.

In the death of Seth Morton Vose on Sunday last at his home in Providence, R. I., this country lost one of its greatest art connoisseurs and oldest art dealers. Mr. Vose was also one of the oldest business men of Rhode Island, having been active since he was nineteen years of age. Mr. Vose, who was in his seventy-ninth year, died as a result of an operation and complications which set in incident to old age. He had been ailing for the past six months, but did not suffer acutely until recently. Mr. Vose was born in Stoughton, Mass., Aug. 5, 1831. His parents were Joseph and Deborah (Churchill) Vose, both of good old Colonial stock. He came to Providence in 1850 and for a short time was with his father and brother Jeremiah in the shoe business. On March 17, 1850, he bought from Ransom Hicks the Westminster Art Gallery, established in 1841, and doing a general art business at 186 Westminster Street. Mr. Vose dealt in paintings, etchings and art objects there for many years, and had a large exhibition gallery, while he had only private exhibition rooms in Boston in which were shown high-class paintings. He was for many years in the Studio Building in Tremont St.

Mr. Vose began to purchase pictures by the Barbizon and Romantic masters almost from the first. He had two most sympathetic co-workers in the late Theodore Robinson and William M. Hunt, and his gallery was the rendezvous of the leading art lovers of New England—such men as Quincy A. Shaw, Peter C. Brookes, Martin Brimmer, Robert Hooper, Thomas Wigglesworth and others, who were the first to buy the Barbizon pictures, being accustomed to call and meet there.

The sons, R. C. and N. M. Vose, took the Boston end of their father's business and have been in the present location at 320 Boylston Street, Boston, for the past thirteen years.
